Field of the Invention The invention concerns a device for the temporary fixation of an implant for the treatment of rheumatic or degenerative disorders of the shoulder. 2. Description of the Prior Art The shoulder is a joint which rotates around three axes of symmetry: scapuloïd, humeral and coracoid. It is made up of a glenoid surface that receives the head of the humerus and of a glenoid fossa formed by a dome-shaped scapula, the latter being able to articulate with respect to the glenoid surface of the head of the humerus. The latter articulates with respect to the collar bone or clavicle in the superior part and with respect to the acromion in the 82157476af
